

RAINY WEATHER AND WET GROUNDS STOP PRACTICE OF NEW YORK TEAM

Indoor Work as Much as Davis's Men Can Do To-Day.

FIGHTER HELD IN BROOKLYN

CUT THROAT IN ASTOR STABLE

The New Yorks will continue their preliminary training stint to work indoors to-day. The Polo Grounds are not in any kind of shape for practice at the opening game, but as the rain kept coming down Manager Davis decided to let his players take a rest.

President Ebbets, who has in charge time to look as though all the training the local team will get will be in actual combat after the season gets under way.

Thursday

Every one of the players of both local teams was on hand yesterday to continue their course of hard training for

of the champion Brooklyn Dodgers Manager, Elinor's absence. Also, his lack of a chance to talk about and other things besides hanging the horseshoe by declaring off the game scheduled with the Rochester team of the Eastern League.

It was President Elinor's intention to play the game this afternoon, but it isn't likely that it will be played owing to the lack of rainy-day baseball con-game. There is little doubt that the champions will come close to winning the quarter crown from the Quakers, who will be well adapted by the loss of Laidie, Chuck Bender and Hernandez.

The New Yorks, on the other hand, while not in second playing condition at their Brooklyn domicile are nevertheless not out of the race. Unlike the Beaneaters a stiff breeze when they tackle them this week. The Hudson

Remarkable Career o

James McNally, Who Boasts He "Never Swindled an Honest Man."

He bought out Edward Parmalee Jones' green-goods plant in Jersey City, and soon became known as "King of the Green-Goods Men." At one time he made as much as $25,000 a month.

He established an optimum joint at Seventh avenue and Forty-second street, which was the most luxurious of its kind in the underworld, and made much

...comes out of the. McNally was an inveterate opium smoker, and also sold large quantities of the drug at great profit.

He next bought an interest in the green-goldis painting establishment of Eugene Maplin, at No. 68 Eighth avenue, which was afterward raided. Marvin served a year in prison, but McNally was not arrested.

Finally matters became too warm, and McNally and his "pals" moved to Bridgeport, Conn., where he lived in His Notable Career.

"Jimmy" McNally's proud boast was that he never swindled an honest man, and this boast was probably well founded, for throughout his career he made his victims those as dishonest as himself. McNally had a force of over forty clerks to attend to his mail alone.
His fortunes began to wane in the East, and with several friends he went to Chicago and tried his old game
there, but the Federal authorities caught them, and McNally was sent to Jail Prison for three years.

BOSTON, Mass., April 15.—Charles H.
Innes, counsel for James W. McNally, the "green-goods king," hunted all day yesterday for the man found guilty of stealing the life of a child, and him he wanted to serve him with papers in the federal court which he has brought against him.

McNally's father was a Methodist clergyman of the North of Ireland, who gave his two sons an excellent education. McNally, coming to New York at an early age, he could not find employment for some time as a waiter in a flower restaurant, but later obtained a position as clerk in a dry-goods store at $8 a week.

It was while thus employed he drifted into the Haymarket dance hall at Thirtieth street and Sixth avenue. There he became acquainted with a woman known as Birdie Warren, and His Shooting Gallery.

They were to be even nightly at the haymarket. After a time he gave up his clerkship and the Warren woman opened an establishment on Sixth avenue. McNally opened an ostensible shooting gallery, but the report of this gallery became the subject of various charges of confidence men and opium-smokers, and Inspector Williams finally closed it. McNally changed it to Second Race—Seven-eighths of a mile—Won by South Brighton, 1 to 3 and out; Chances 3 to 1 for place, was second and 3 to 1 for show, was third.

Frederick Walton, thirty-one year old, cut his throat in the stable of John Jacob Astor, No. 3 East Sixty-fifth street, at noon today.

He was removed to the Presbyterian Hospital.

Walton was the favorite groom of John Jacob Astor, and had been in his employ for many years.

Apparently he had been drinking. Col. Astor and frequently reproved him and had refused to let him attend him on his drive.

Walton brooded over the reprimand and today, while in the stable he cut his throat with a razor.

A doctor in an ambulance was sent to the hospital. When it stopped at the Astor residence a great crowd

The ambulance surgeon said that the jugular vein was reached by the blade and that Walton could not recover.

Albert Francis and Thomas Steele, both in the Astor employ, were standing in the stable and wondered why Walton had not come down to help.

Walton slept upstairs with the other men and had not appeared all morning. Francis went up at noon, and walking into Walton's room found him on the floor in a pool of blood. His throat was cut and he was as if dead. A razor lay on his side.

Francis yelled in excitement and rushed downstairs.

A man passing heard him say some thing about a cat thrust, rushed down Fifth avenue to Fifty-ninth street where he saw Policeman Thiele. Thiele ran up to the doctor's home, admitted suicide, he cried.

Thiele ran up the six blocks at top speed, he found a crowd about the house. An ambulance had been sent for by this time. Thiele went to the house of Edward Walton, whom he made a prisoner.

No reason for the suicide could be found. Thiele said he had no explanation. He left no letters and no explanation of his motive.

Thiele was said to be at home this morning and a boiler was sent to ask her about the attempted suicide. The boiler said she had no idea.

Mrs. Astor says it was only a slight accident and the man is not serious.

Boasts He "Never Swindled an Honest Man."

"Jimmy" McNally is back in New York still mourning for his life.

He met her in Boston two days ago, after an exciting chase in cars and on foot, and finally separated her from her male companion and took her to the Thornhill Hotel in that city.

She remained there all night, but early yesterday, while the ex-green-goods gentleman was sleeping soundly, she arose and leaving the hotel took a train for New York.

Many hours McNally searched for her in Boston before learning she had returned here, then he followed me to the jail," said McNally, who at the Marlborough, today.

"While my property affairs were being straightened out I got a room in West 142nd street. When I went down to dinner the first woman I met was a stunning-looking woman directly opposite me.

"My brother told me the young woman's name was Alice Dawson, and that she was a crack model. One day I met her in the hall and got an introduction. After that I met Miss Dawson every day.

"We went to football games and horse racing. She was always and forever having a lot of Princeton students call on
